Last Thursday the Master Chefs of St Patrick’s School, put on a feast that will go down as one of the highlights for the year. Although George or Matt could make the final for judging meals, I was to step up and taste the fabulous food. The students all made a dish and provided a label highlighting the name of the meal—its origin and recipe. As the students served their dishes, tables around the room had checklists and pencils ready to make their judgements. Although there was not stand out winner or dish, the staff unanimously agreed that the food was absolutely delicious and professionally presented. Well done team!
Do All Things Well