Clever Mr Brown

This week I visited the brilliant Mr Brown and his chargers in Year Five. Clever Mr Brown’s class was busy either listening to stories or reading. Some students were listening to Andy Griffith’s book, Pencil Doom. Andy is a renowned author who has written children’s books that have reached the New York Times bestsellers! As you can see our students were totally engrossed as they listened intently to, Pencil Doom. In the classroom students were actively engaged in reading comprehension cards, reading cartoons, broadening themselves by reading and participating in self-assessment activities on the computer, while some students were happily sitting on the floor reading their favourite novels.

It was an enjoyable moment on one hand to see students self-manage their reading skills while answering levelled comprehensive questions from cards in the Reading Box.

Mr Brown, your classroom is full of clever readers! Well done
